Part I. Background/History

To ensure that committee runs smoothly, delegates be very familiar with the topic at hand. In this section, explain the backstory and history of the issue. Be sure to include: What exactly is the problem (explain facets and subproblems)? When did it become a topic of international concern? Has the problem grown in recent years or diminished? Do some research!

Part II. UN Involvement

Most likely, the United Nations has already addressed this issue before and taken action. Summarize the most relevant UN action regarding your topic and then address the following: Were previous UN resolutions and actions effective? Why or why not? Has your own country participated?

Part III. Country Position

Where do you (your country) stand on this issue? How does the issue affect your country? Have there been lasting or apparent effects? Include at least two examples of policies or action enacted by your country based on its stance on the topic.

Part IV. Solutions

This should be the biggest portion of your paper and it will drive your debates and discussions with other delegates. Focus on what your nation believes should be done to solve the issue: what concrete action do you think will best address the issue in a way that benefits your country and befits your policies? Perhaps you would like to work with a non-governmental organization, increase military presence, impose sanctions, create a UN funded program. Just make sure it is feasible and include a set funding source and timeline. Outline specific action or strategies that your country is willing to take and that you will present in committee to other delegates.

Part V. Bibliography

The bibliography must be in MLA Format and should be included at the end of your paper. Be sure to include all sources used (recommended: 5 minimum) in writing your paper, as well as either in-text citations or MLA formatted footnotes, so that we can evaluate the type of sources you are using.
